

The Annabel Harwood Trust

Registered Charity No. 1086637

“Providing information to help parents cope with the loss of their baby”

About the Annabel Harwood Trust

The Trust was established in November 2000 following the stillbirth of Annabel who died at full term. The Trust was registered as a charity in May 2001.

The purpose of the Trust

The main aim of the Trust is to provide custom made support packs providing the information to help parents cope with losing a baby at, or around birth.

Although there is a wealth of helpful and supportive information available to help parents of neonatal death or stillborn babies, during the first weeks and months following such a tragedy, parents are often not able to get to this information easily, right when it is most needed.

The support packs contain information regarding support groups, local councillors, web sites and available books. We also include selected books in the packs.

To ensure that the correct information is provided, we are working in partnership with SANDS (Stillbirth and Neonatal Death Society) and the Brighton & Sussex NHS Trust. The support packs are free where distributed directly to parents through the local health authorities. The Support Packs are also available to buy directly from the Charity.

We are also providing the Brighton & Sussex NHS Trust with additional Cardio TocoGraph (CTG) equipment, donated in the Trust's name. This equipment has links with helping prevent Neonatal Death or Stillbirth by helping to detect foetal distress, possibly reducing the chance of another stillborn baby.

Why provide Cardio TocoGraph Equipment?

As well as helping parents cope with the loss of a baby, we also wanted to contribute in a way which may prevent the loss of a baby. After discussing with the hospital, it was felt that donating CTG equipment would be most beneficial. This equipment was very significant during Annabel's short life, so we felt it a worthwhile and important second Trust objective.

Our Web Site

In addition to the support packs, the web site offers a wealth of information and further links to other sites of interest. Our Web site address is:
